

25th Annual Faculty Day Conference and Awards Ceremony

virtual

Welcome!

The Faculty Day Conference and Award Ceremony affords us a chance to pause from business as usual in order to recognize and celebrate the accomplishments of the Brooklyn College faculty. Throughout the day, we'll have the opportunity to engage with our colleagues' exciting research and scholarship, discuss pedagogical interests and exchange ideas about faculty life on campus. We'll wrap it all up with an awards ceremony to honor our fellow faculty members for their accomplishments in teaching, research, and service.

The Faculty Day Conference is a unique college-wide event to foster connections with our colleagues and improve the quality of intellectual and social life here on campus. While this year's conference is once again virtual, it remains a wonderful way to engage in dialogue about academic and pedagogical activities with our colleagues from remarkably diverse disciplines.

Thank you for joining us at this year's Faculty Day Conference and contributing to Brooklyn College's professional and intellectual vitality.

Symposia Session 1 (9:30–10:45 a.m.)

Developing Anti-racist Curricula

Moderator: Raymond Weston (Health and Nutrition Sciences)

- Enrique Pouget (Health and Nutrition Sciences), “Developing Anti-racist Curricula in Biostatistics and in Health and Nutrition Sciences”
- Yana Kuchirko (Psychology), “An Anti-Racist Psychology: Approaches to Reimagining Curricula and Pedagogy”
- Malka Simon (Art), “The Art of Anti-Racism: Rethinking Curriculum in Art History”

Panelists will present efforts to make their curricula more anti-racist. Historical and contemporary challenges to revising curricula for antiracism will be discussed using examples from multiple departments and disciplines. Raymond Weston from Health and Nutrition Sciences will serve as moderator, and will help to frame the issues and guide what we hope will be a spirited discussion.

SAFE@BC: Supporting Advancement of Faculty Equity at Brooklyn College

Moderator: Katlyn Milless (ADVANCE Catalyst Project Manager)

- Cheryl Carmichael (Psychology), “Faculty Service: Satisfaction, Work-Life Balance and Equity”
- James Eaton (Office of Associate Provost for Faculty and Administration), “Data Warehouse and Exploring Disparities in Career Progression”
- Louise Hainline (Psychology), “Faculty Mentoring, Guidance and Support Mechanisms”

The SAFE@BC project, funded by an NSF ADVANCE Program grant, has worked to understand well-being, equity, and retention for faculty in the School of Natural and Behavioral Sciences (NBS), with a particular focus on women faculty. This panel will describe SAFE@BC’s efforts surrounding service demands, professional progression, working conditions, and institutional support for mentoring as well as our planned initiatives to increase equity and inclusion for faculty in NBS departments.

Symposia Session 2 (11:15 a.m.–12:30 p.m.)

Incorporating Sustainability: Challenges, Best Practices and Lessons Learned

Moderator: Rebecca Boger (Earth and Environmental Sciences; Urban Sustainability)

- Kelly Britt (Anthropology), “Environmental Sustainability and Heritage Management: an Engaged Interdisciplinary Research Project”
- Zhongqi Joshua Cheng (Earth and Environmental Sciences), “We need a Department of Urban Sustainability at Brooklyn College!”
- Michael Menser (Philosophy), “Climate Justice, Public Engagement and Sustainability Studies”

In this session, faculty who teach or conduct sustainability research will share their experiences, challenges, and lessons learned. Come ready to share your experiences or to get ideas for your classes. Presenters and participants can discuss ways to support each other to build a stronger and more visible presence of sustainability education and research on campus.

Faculty Writing Group: A Community of Scholars

- Gregory Smithsimon (Sociology)
- Teresa Snider-Stein (Theater)
- Klara Marton (Communication Arts, Sciences and Disorders)
- Paula Massood (Feinstein Graduate School of Cinema)

Faculty will come together to discuss and present the projects they have been working on over the past several years as part of the Faculty Writing Group. This writing community, formerly called “writing boot camp,” has met regularly during the winter, regular semesters and over the summer to set accountable goals on writing and other scholarly work, and support each other in their diverse intellectual projects. This roundtable is a chance for participants in any of the writing groups to talk about their work. Over the years, we've heard about the work our colleagues are doing, but often only hear tantalizing hints about what sound like fascinating projects. Everyone is invited to attend the roundtable—or join the next session of the writing group.

Re-envisioning General Education at Brooklyn College

- Beth Evans (Library)
- Prudence Cumberbatch (Africana Studies)
- Jean Eddy Saint Paul (Sociology)
- Micha Tomkiewicz (Physics)

While Brooklyn College conforms to CUNY's Pathways system of general education requirements and transfer guidelines in our course offerings, we have yet to engage in a deeper discussion of what a general education should provide our students. Join the conversation and help create a general education vision and curriculum at Brooklyn College that reflects our times.

Drop-in Virtual Roundtable Conversations (1–2 p.m.)

But, I've Been Mentoring my Whole Career! Why Formal Mentoring Training Matters

- Rosamond King (English, School of Humanities and Social Sciences Mentor)
- Stephanie Jensen-Moulton (Conservatory of Music; School of Visual, Media and Performing Arts Mentor)
- María Scharrón-del Río (Associate Dean; School of Education Mentor)
- James Lynch (Business Management; Koppelman School of Business Mentor)
- Peter Lipke (Biology; School of Natural and Behavioral Sciences Mentor)

During the past three semesters, the School-Wide Mentors of the Faculty Mentoring Initiative have discovered how much information on mentoring is out there! (at Brooklyn College?). Through formal training, we can learn best practices, and become better mentors who can then teach our mentees to become excellent mentors. But how do we talk about formal mentoring without minimizing all the work that innately good mentors are already doing? Come sit with us and find out.

What do you want? Tell the Center for Teaching and Learning!

- Madeline Fox (Sociology, Outgoing Director of the CTL)
- Malka Simon (Art, Incoming Director of the CTL)

This roundtable session will solicit feedback and suggestions for programming at the Center for Teaching and Learning as we return to in-person teaching, and as the CTL transitions to a new director. Which workshops were most useful over the past two years and what would you like to see more of? What would ease your transition back to the classroom? Share your thoughts so that we can meet your needs for the coming academic year.

Campus Climate for AAPI Faculty, Staff, and Students: A Barometer

- Yung-Yi Diana Pan (Sociology)
- Sau-Fong Au (Women's Center)
- Vinit Parmar (Film)
- Rhea Rahman (Anthropology)
- Mobina Hashmi (Television, Radio and Emerging Media)

The Asian American and Pacific Islander population at Brooklyn College has increased substantially over the past decade. However, our college does not yet offer AAPI curriculum. Further, since the start of the current pandemic, the violence targeting AAPIs has escalated. A lack of recognition in curriculum or current events, coupled with experiences of bias may leave AAPI faculty, staff, and students feeling disregarded at Brooklyn College. We seek to generally understand: How are our AAPI community members doing? This roundtable serves as a barometer—an opportunity to discuss our concerns, and share strategies to ensure a broader sense of belonging. This informal discussion is not limited to AAPIs, but rather anyone in the Brooklyn College community interested in the experiences of our students and peers.

Symposia Session 3 (2:30–3:45 p.m.)

The Censorship Pandemic in US Public Schools: Erasing Voices from Libraries and the Curriculum

Moderator: Sonia Murrow (Secondary Education), “How Debate and Controversy Make History Education Stronger”

- April Bedford (Dean, School of Education), “Book Bans and Parental Rights: Current Challenges in Children's Literature”
- Karel Rose (Childhood, Bilingual and Special Education), “The Allegory of the Cave in America's Classrooms”
- María Scharrón-del Río (Associate Dean, School of Education), “Silence = Death: Evidence-based Reflections on the Dangers of ‘Don't Say Gay’ Policies”

In this session panelists will discuss and analyze the most recent culture war resulting in censorship and book banning in school districts across the United States. Each speaker will address an aspect of the “censorship pandemic” from a different disciplinary perspective.

Teaching with A People's Guide to New York City

Moderator: Emily Tumpson Molina (Sociology)

- Alan Aja (Puerto Rican and Latino Studies), “Teaching with and about Community Organizations: Arab American Association of NY”
- Kenneth Gould (Sociology; Dean, Humanities and Social Sciences) and Tammy Lewis (Sociology; Associate Provost for Faculty and Administration), “The Green Gentrification of Brooklyn's Gowanus Canal”
- Lucas Rubin (Assistant Dean, Brooklyn College's Graduate Center for Worker Education), “A Topography of Sports in Brooklyn”

Twelve Brooklyn College faculty contributed to the recently published A People's Guide to New York City. Four contributors join one of the authors to present pieces of the book and discuss ways other BC faculty across disciplines might incorporate it into their courses.

C3-PONet: Community, Classroom to Career Potential

Moderator: TR Muth (Biology)

- Zhongqi Joshua Cheng (Earth and Environmental Sciences), “Engaging with Community Problems”
- Anjana Saxena (Biology), “Classroom Skill Sets and Scientific Exploration”
- Emral Devany (Biology, KBCC), “Building Community College Partnerships”
- Andre Fontenelle (Magner Center), “Connecting with the Career Center”

STEM students gain foundational science knowledge in the classroom but may be disconnected from real-life application. The NSF funded STEMCEL (Science, Technology, Engineering, and Math, Career Exploration Laboratory) project attempts to bridge this gap, like the Star Wars droid C3-PO, who was programmed for etiquette and empathy with excellent problem-solving skills. Come learn about STEMCEL and bring ideas for community-derived problems that could be integrated in the curriculum and provide multi-disciplinary exposure to career options.
